

Plant Availability List – March 20, 2013

Note: A price change has been in effect with the launch of the new web site on March 15, 2011. I will be reworking the web site during the winter of 2012 - 2013

Propagation from cuttings usually takes 2 weeks to root. Colored dots indicate forecasted availability. Newly struck cuttings are marked by ●. Newly potted cuttings are marked with a blue dot ● and will be ready in 10 - 21 days, depending on variety and temperatures.

Recently re-acquired and new stock plants are marked by a green dot ●, and some production will be ongoing through winter, but mainly in spring of 2013. Replacement stock plants I need to find a source of are marked by a magenta dot ●. Those items without any dot are mostly plants that I have as established stock plants. More replacements will be coming.

I am restricting distribution of plants labeled PP and especially PPAF to comply with royalty agreements

All plants from 2012 stock are in need of repotting or setting out. I will try to issue new availability lists from autumn through spring at least every 4 to 5 weeks. The rare seed plants will be producing new stock plants with some production in sometime in spring 2013.

Assistance in locating new stock plants would be appreciated These are part of the collection that I have lost and can replace fairly easily, or are about to be propagated. Many of these have been re-acquired and will be back in stock in spring of 2013, either from seed or from new stock plants.

More items will be added later in the season, from seed sources and from new material obtained in trade. Additionally, certain species like Prostantheras, Westringias, S. regla and S. sessei require warmer conditions to root cuttings.

I am modifying my potting soil mix to include both Bio-Comp (contains composted peanut hulls) and PermaTil (mostly for tuberous plants that need drainage and air).. I may be able to do proportional fertilization, and am now using Nutricotr slow released fertilizer, to avoid shattering of pellets during summer..

Notice! my prices increased to $5.00 each for 2.5 inch pots, $6.00 each for 3 inch pots, and $7.50 each for 3.5 inch pots as of March 2011. This was the first increase in ten years, and reflects increased costs for greenhouse supplies and operation, which are a reflection of increased costs for fuel and petroleum-based supplies, and for the rent of the new nursery site and utility charges. I previously had the nursery at my home, and at a friends residence for a nominal fee.

Shipping cost will be based on previous orders of about the same size to the same area and shipped by the same method. (USPS Priority mail vs. either 2-day or 3-day air UPS or Fed Ex). For USPS Priority, this is around 20 - 25% of the cost of the order. The minimum USPS charge is $8.00 (usually 2-3 plants for around 100 miles from central North Carolina). Shipping charges will change according to changes in USPS and UPS charges and petrol prices..

I hope to begin redesigning the new site during winter of 2012 - 2013. I will be adding many more Salvias to the gallery, and more features, such as how to construct a small collector's nursery with a greenhouse and cold frame at minimal costs
